

No objections: Sixth formers spend a day at The Old Bailey in London.

Students in court at Lawrence case

THERE were no objections when Langley Academy paid a visit to the Old Bailey in London.

The academy arranged for 15 sixth formers, some of whom are studying law for A-level, to spend a day observing the Stephen Lawrence case at London's Central Criminal Court.

The rare opportunity gave the students a chance to see the judicial system in action first hand.

Acting principal of Langley Academy, Peter Blewett said: "The sixth formers of Langley Academy were a credit. It is good to see our young people taking a keen interest in our judicial system."

The day was part of a regular programme of trips. The next one will be to the Houses of Parliament as guests of Slough MP Fiona Mactaggart.
